Euro-Atlantic and Euro-Asiatic Concerns of an Enlarged Europe: a Bulgarian View

Plamen Pantev

Institute for Security and International Studies (ISIS)
Sofia, August 2004
RESEARCH REPORTS 16

Institute for Security and International Studies
(ISIS)
Sofia

THIS RESEARCH REPORT IS A VERSION OF THE AUTHOR’S PRESENTATION ON A SIMILAR SUBJECT AT THE INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS DIRECTORS CONFERENCE (I R D C), ON 18-19 JUNE 2004, ORGANISED BY THE AUSTRIAN INSTITUTE FOR INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS IN VIENNA AT THE PREMISES OF THE DIPLOMATIC ACADEMY ON THE TOPIC: “VISION OR DI-VISION IN AN ENLARGED EUROPE?” THE RESEARCH REPORT DRAWS FROM HIS PREPARED TEXT AND FROM THE RESULTS OF ON-GOING STUDIES ON EURO-ATLANTIC, BALKAN AND BLACK SEA-CASPIAN SEA REGIONAL SECURITY STUDIES BY ISIS.

The author

© Institute for Security and International Studies (ISIS), 2004
ISBN 954 – 9533 – 19 – 0
For historical, geopolitical, domestic and other reasons the enlarged Europe of 25 ‘+2’; ‘+3’, or ‘+4’ does not have a homogenized vision of the extent to which EU should differentiate itself in the realm of security from the United States of America. This causes fundamental concerns to the new members of the Union and to the other two, three or four that would join in the next few years. The Bulgarian perceptions of this issue cause concerns as to the most appropriate roles and functions of the country in the Euro-Atlantic area as well as relative to the Euro-Asiatic neighborhood when the country joins the Union.

First, as a NATO member that keeps its commitments and responsibilities to the allies and as a future EU member Bulgaria has concerns as to how to organize most effectively its participation in the Alliance and in the European Security and Defense Policy of the Union, especially in the NATO Response Force (NRF) and in the EU Rapid Reaction Force (EURRF). Being at the very entrance of both institutions we have a feeling that the similarity of security and defense tasks are not logically linked to the principle of the economy of organization and the principle of financial effectiveness. The experience with Iraq showed something even worse – there is a perceptual and political differentiation within EU and NATO. The problem had to be overcome through clear and firm choice of position in support or in opposition of the leading NATO country – the United States. The problem will, however, persist in an enlarged and enlarging Europe and the functional integration in the defense and security sector would not be able to progress smoothly and contribute to the furthering of the integration in the other functional sectors. Another concern in the discussed context is how to keep the interest of NATO, USA and the EU on the Western Balkans and complete the hard job, started in the 1990s.

Second, in this same line of thought there are certain concerns about the involvement of the country in the Union’s neighborhood policy, mainly its Euro-Asiatic direction. While the interest of the EU is nearer to its borders, the interest of the leading NATO ally – the United States, is territorially bigger and goes beyond the EU neighborhood area. Bulgaria risks to be perceived as non-complying with EU visions and policy if continuously involved in the Greater Middle East region while the Union does not itself involve there. Bulgaria hardly has the potential to bridge the interests of the two partnering centers of power, though the efforts of Sofia would not stop. This problem, however, limits the capacity of the country to focus on an issue of direct economic interest as the construction of TRACECA, the ‘new silk road’ – an issue of priority interest for the Union too. Eventually the G-8, EU, EU-US and NATO summits in June 2004 would channel in a more favorable for countries like Bulgaria direction the interpretation of the ‘Greater Middle East’ responsibilities of the participants, in these prestigious political clubs.

Another concern of immense magnitude is the yet unreformed Russian military establishment that continues to be educated in Russian imperial dreams in its military education institutions. At the same time the challenge of having a socially vibrant and democratic Russia in the ranks of the leading countries, fighting terrorism would require imagination and effort, including from Bulgarian diplomacy and security policy thought and practice.

In an enlarged Europe the neighborhood gets closer to the heart of the continent, so do the problems of Eurasia. A settled trans-Atlantic relationship between enlarging Europe and the United States is a powerful guarantee for coping with the Union’s neighborhood issues.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR
Plamen Ilarionov Pantev – (b. 1952), Senior Research Fellow; Ph. D. and Associate Professor in International Relations and International Law at Sofia University “St. Kliment Ohridsky”. He is expert in security studies, civil-military relations, foreign policy forecasting, international law and international negotiations. He is also founder and Director of the Institute for Security and International Studies (ISIS).

ABOUT THE INSTITUTE FOR SECURITY AND INTERNATIONAL STUDIES (ISIS)
The Institute for Security and International Studies (ISIS) is a non-governmental non-profit organisation, established legally in November 1994. It organises and supports research in the field of security and international relations. Fields of research interest are:
national security and foreign policy of Bulgaria; civil-military relations, democratic control of the armed forces and security sector reform; European Integration, Euro-Atlantic security and institutions; Balkan and Black Sea regional security; global and regional studies; policy of the USA, Russia and the CIS; information aspects of security and information warfare; quantitative methods and computer simulation of security studies; international legal studies; theory and practice of international negotiations. ISIS organises individual and team studies; publishes research studies and research reports; organises conferences, seminars, lectures and courses; develops an information bank and virtual library through the Internet; supports younger researchers of security; and develops independent expertise in security and international relations for Bulgarian civil society. The institute networks internationally and establishes links with academic organisations and official institutions in the country and abroad on a contract basis. ISIS is not linked to any political party, movement or organisation, religious or ideological denomination. The institute has a flexible group of voluntary associates – 5 senior researchers, 8 PhD holders and 5 MAs – varying annually between 8 and 13 in all.

PUBLICATIONS OF ISIS

Research Studies:

"Bulgaria and the Balkans in the Common Foreign and Security Policy of the European Union" (Plamen Pantev, Valeri Rachev, Venelin Tsachevsky), 44 pp., July,

"Problems of Civil-Military Relations in Bulgaria: Approaches to Improving the Civilian Monitoring of the Armed Forces" (Plamen Pantev, Valeri Rachev, Todor

"Bulgaria and the European Union in the Process of Building a Common European Defence" (Plamen Pantev, Valeri Rachev, Tilcho Ivanov), 51 pp., September 1996.
Research Studies – 3. In Bulgarian and English.

"Strengthening of the Balkan Civil Society: the Role of the NGOs in International and English.

English.

“Prenegotiations: the Theory and How to Apply it to Balkan Issues” (Plamen Pantev),

Research Reports:

"The Balkans in the Cooling Relations Between Russia and Western Europe" (Dinko Dinkov), 29 pp., November 1995. Research Reports-1. In Bulgarian.

Note: All publications in English have electronic versions at the Institute’s website hosted by the International Security Network (ISN), Switzerland:  http://www.isn.ch/isis

ISIS Address
1618 Sofia, lc “Krasno selo”, bl. 194 , ent. B, ap. 36
P. O. Box 231, Bulgaria
Phone/Fax: ++(359 - 2-) 8551 828
E-Mail Address: isis@mgu.bg
Website: http://www.isn.ethz.ch/isis